

I support competition in the radio market. I purchased XM radio because its convenient and provides me another option to traditional radio (AM/FM). Legislating who can provide what content seems absurd. The best outcome for consumers is always a competitive, equal playing field. While FM/AM providers own their frequency, the satellite providers are bearing an enormous capital investment for their access to consumers. Let consumers decide with their wallets, not corporations seeking to limit alternatives. Do not prohibit satellite providers from providing local content. Rob
